The web browser on your computer will be re-directed to the credit card providers website. Once you are at their website you will be asked to connect your MetaMask wallet via a connect button on their site. The connect process looks the same as below but it is the providers website you are on.

Note: The reason that MetaMask must connect is so that the address the crypto is sent to is captured and saved. Both of these methods of connecting MetaMask are common however you should never connect your MetaMask (or any wallet) to a site that is not reputable. This type of action is targeted by scammers and can result in the loss of funds. If unsure do not connect!

This image shows the MetaMask wallet connected to the credit card provider, ready to carry out the credit card transaction.

- 5. All credit card providers must by law carry out a process called 'Know Your Customer' (KYC) as part of all crypto purchases to guard against money laundering.
- 6. At this point you are required to enter your email address, if you have not bought crypto from this provider you will then be stepped through the KYC process. It is very straight forward and the on-screen guidance while different for every provider is very good. Read what is required and then provide the detail.
- 7. The process takes only a few minutes and then when approved the crypto is delivered to your MetaMask Wallet normally within 30 minutes. You also get several emails advising you of the process. Check your emails and the links in them if any verification issue occurs.

Please note: sometimes when first buying crypto directly with a debit or credit card the bank may block the transaction. If this happens you may need to contact your bank to manually approve the transaction. If that doesn't work, there are other alternatives via New Zealand retailers such as Easy Crypto. Feel free to reach out to us for further assistance too.
